Celebrate Farmer's Day by Supporting a Local Farmer

Henderson, CO – Farmer's Day is recognized in October, in order to honor the hard labor of farmers throughout time. It is unsure when and how this day came about, and has been celebrated in both September and October. This makes sense because it seems both months are when farmer's harvests seem to be complete. However, it appears that October 12 is the most common date it is celebrated.

Farmer's Day is a great time to support local farmers. Buy from a local farmer, visit a farm or plant something in your own garden. One local farmer that deserves to be recognized in Colorado is Lily Organics Fresh Skin Care Founder and Formulator, Lily Morgan.

Lily Morgan grew up on her family's apple orchard. A seventh generation farmer, she has never lost her reverence for the land and all it produces. For nearly 25 years her company, Lily Organics, has been creating handmade, organic skin care products incorporating ingredients from Lily's very own USDA Certified Organic farm, essential oils from natural botanicals and other organically grown herbs. Lily Organics products are 100% non-synthetic and chemical-free, and are freshly produced every week in the company's USDA Certified Organic lab.

"We have collected the very essence and life force of the plants to bring you the most effective skin care that gives you the results you demand," Lily Morgan.

Lily is also committed to making a difference in her community. Lily has worked as a drug and alcohol counselor and as Executive Director of the Association for Senior Citizens, which she founded in Denver and helped raise over 10 million dollars for them. She has served on several non-profit boards and currently volunteers with the Adoption Exchange and the Colorado Christian Home, and supports Tibetans.

Lily Morgan is the author of Beauty, Health, and Happiness: A way of Life. She is the founder and formulator of Lily Organics, Fresh, Chemical-free skin care line of facial care products. You can reach her at her website www.lilyorganics.com. 303- 668-1128.
